American Pain Consortium Announces Appointment of New President

INDIANAPOLIS – American Pain Consortium, LLC (APC) is pleased to announce the appointment of Sean Hayes as its president, effective as of Nov. 1, 2019.

Mr. Hayes brings 15 years of healthcare finance experience to his role as President of APC, Center for Pain Management’s parent organization. Before joining APC, he was the co-founder and Senior Vice President at Ensemble Health Partners, which he helped grow to a billion-dollar organization in less than four years.

“I’m excited to join American Pain Consortium in their community-focused delivery of the highest standard of care and innovation in pain management,” Mr. Hayes said. “My mission is to enhance our operational excellence, so we can expand our services to additional communities.”

Mr. Hayes has extensive experience in helping healthcare companies achieve both operational and financial excellence to support their missions. He believes in putting people first – always – because people drive the company’s culture and results.

Dr. Edward Kowlowitz, CEO of APC, commented, “I’m confident that Sean’s expertise in revenue cycle management will help us streamline the integration of our future acquisitions and allow me to focus on physician relations, mentoring our junior physicians, and growing the company.”

APC brought Mr. Hayes on board three months ago to provide consulting services on an interim basis. Frank McMahan, Founding Partner of American Discovery Capital (ADC), a minority owner of APCH, said that during that time, “Sean has demonstrated strong leadership skills, a tremendous work ethic, and superior domain expertise. He’s a results-oriented executive with a passion for excellence in patient care.”

Mr. Hayes previously held senior management roles at Community Health Systems, Steward Health Care, and Midwest Regional Medical Center. He holds a Master’s in Business Administration from the University of Central Oklahoma.

ABOUT AMERICAN PAIN CONSORTIUM

APC is a growing network of interventional pain management practices and pain-focused ambulatory surgical centers (ASC) that provides state-of-the-art, patient-focused support services to comprehensive pain management practices in Indiana and Ohio. Providers at APC focus on managing acute and chronic pain with treatments that include nerve blocks and injections, neuromodulation and implants, physical therapy, psychological counseling, medication management, and compliance monitoring.

APC is led by its CEO Dr. Edward Kowlowitz, who has 30 years of experience as a practicing interventional pain medicine physician and an ASC owner and operator. He is Board-Certified by the American Board of Anesthesiology with added qualification in Pain Management and is Board-Certified by the American Board of Addiction Medicine. He is a leading expert in chronic pain and spinal cord stimulation therapies. Dr. Kowlowitz founded Center for Pain Management (APCH's predecessor company) in 1993 to fully integrate rehab, mental health, imaging, lab, and ASC-based procedures into one cohesive pain treatment program.

APC's expansion strategy includes acquisitions of additional pain clinics that deliver outstanding patient care and have potential for growth by adding a broader suite of pain treatments, procedures, and services. Unlike other private equity or capital investment ventures, APC is majority physician-owned.
